

PATENT APPLICATION

Summary

The invention relates to a method for the detection and characterisation of primary tumours and separate areas of primary tumours, respectively. Clusters of tumour cells, extracted from sample material, are isolated and concentrated, followed by an analysis of genetic changes in these isolated cell clusters.